Forecast For Highland & Eilean Siar
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Sunday 16 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy start in north Sunday otherwise sunny spells and showers.

Today:
Cloudy start in the far northwest with patchy rain soon dying out. Otherwise sunny spells with scattered showers developing, perhaps locally heavy over more inland areas, best sunshine developing around the coasts. Winds will remain light. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:
One or two showers may linger this evening and tonight, mainly over Lochaber and the Great Glen, but most places will become dry. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Monday:
Bright or sunny intervals and scattered showers, these becoming more focused across East Highland with some heavy in the afternoon. Western coasts and the Isles seeing the best of sunshine. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Mostly cloudy Tuesday with rain or showers but becoming brighter Wednesday with sunshine and scattered showers. Wednesday mainly cloudy with some rain.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.